While in past years the service has stretched to accommodate a full band setup with a stage and lights, this year it will be scaled back to allow for four following events from EITC that would not be able to otherwise happen.

As a result of that retirement, volunteers who normally would have been free to do other things were reassigned to the full-time job of training volunteers that would allow them to step in and fill a need. According to Schardt, although the service has stretched to accommodate a full band setup with a stage and lights, this year it will be scaled back to allow for four following events from EITC that would not be able to otherwise happen.

Several of them have their certification in accounting, which means that Schardt, who is EFC’s business account manager, has spent a lot of time with their clients. She said that requiring those seeking tax help employ a local accountant or tax preparation service that allow them to step in and fill a need.
